

Dear Members of the Paleopathology Association,

On behalf of the Paleopathology Association Board of Directors, and with regret I am writing to let you know that we have cancelled our 2020 Annual North American Meeting in Los Angeles. We are following the lead of the American Association of Physical Anthropologists, who have cancelled their meeting. This is the responsible thing to do during the current pandemic.

We will work out the details of refunding registration fees in the coming days. Please realize that our officers are also professors and like many of you, most of them have just been asked by their universities to deliver their courses remotely, so they have their hands full. We appreciate your patience. AAPA has indicated that individuals will need to cancel their own hotel reservations and travel plans.

In the coming days, we will work on ways to communicate information that would have been brought forward in our annual business meeting. We will also discuss possible ways for you to disseminate your research results that were to be presented at the meeting.

Best wishes for your health,

Anne Katzenberg,
President, Paleopathology Association
